EXPANSION

Introduction

In Bound by Fate you'll be joined by a fellow player, forming a team and sharing a common Destiny. Together you will fight against time and a second pair of players. Play smart, and share quests and items to explore the world faster than your opponents. The team that manages to cooperate better and fulfill their Destiny faster will win.

Before the Game

Before playing, set up the game, following the base game rules. As the final step, you must divide 4 players into two teams. Discuss and decide the teams, or choose teams randomly. The players should sit around the table in alternating turn order, so that each player has their two opponents from the other team sitting on their left and right. Each of the two team members takes one Action marker from the same pair.

Game Flow

Bound by Fate follows all the rules of Destinies. Please refer to the base game rules on how to play the game. Below we present the new unique features of Bound by Fate and rules differences.

Communication

During the game, members of the same team are allowed to freely discuss their decisions and strategy, but all communication must be done by speaking aloud so the opposing team can hear it. Members of the same team are not allowed to pass notes, send texts, or communicate with each other in any way which does not allow opponents to hear it.

Exchange

During the start of the turn step, if both team members are on the same tile they may freely exchange Item cards and coins between each other. They are not allowed to swap any other game elements like Experience points, Skill Markers or Dice.

Summoning Teammate

Anytime during a visit in a Point of Interest, a player may summon their teammate. The teammate must agree to be summoned and their miniature must be within standard movement range. I.e., the summoned teammate miniature can not be further from the summoning teammate's miniature than two tiles, or they must use some item that increases their movement range.

If the requirements are met and summoned teammate agrees to be summoned, then do these steps in order:

- 1 Press  in the app.
- 2 Place the summoned teammate's Action marker into the summoning teammate's supply area.
- 3 Move the summoned teammate's miniature onto the same tile with the summoning teammate's miniature.

From this moment, all interactions and tests during this turn are performed together by both teammates. This means that:

- The summoned teammate may use their items and spend their Experience points as if it was their own turn.
- During each test both teammates perform the test, using their own skills and Item cards, but they sum up the number of successes they got and inform the app about the sum of successes.
- In  option, Item cards owned by any teammate may be scanned.
- All effects of tests and interactions, both positive and negative, are applied to both teammates. The only exception is Item cards. Whenever teammates receive an Item card, they also gain an additional Experience point and decide together which of them takes the Item card. The other player takes the additional Experience point.
- During this turn teammates may perform as many Exchanges as they wish, but not during tests.

Summoning allows teammates to have a very special turn where they are much more powerful together than alone, but it comes with a price. The first turn of the summoned player afterward consists only of the turn start phase, during which they will typically only do two things:

- Refresh one Effort Die and use “on turn start” item effects if they have any.
- Take their Action marker back from their teammate's board.

Finale

Teammates share their destiny and work together. Their progress is counted collectively and they only need to complete one chosen path to start the finale.

Both teammates have to enter their Finale together. So both player character's miniatures have to be on the tile where the Finale's Point of Interest is located.

In the Finale, both teammates act together on each turn of the teammate who triggered their Finale, as if the other teammate was summoned. So they both perform all tests and sum up their successes. They can also freely scan Item cards belonging to either of them.

All future turns of the other teammate (who did not trigger their Finale) are skipped, so that the team does only one turn together each day (during the turn of the teammate who triggered their Finale).
