NOT A STANDALONE GAME

MOONRAKERS BASE GAME NECESSARY TO PLAY

INTRODUCTION

As the Utopian Alliance consolidates power in the surrounding planet clusters, the Moonrakers have finally begun to rise above their petty conflicts and unite under one banner.

Gaining enough Prestige to lead the Moonrakers is still every champion's goal, but now diplomacy might be your best bet at rising above your peers.

GAME OVERVIEW

In Binding Ties, the first major expansion to Moonrakers, players will gain additional rewards from allying with each other as they gain Faction Reputation with the great houses that each player represents.

Reputation can mean the difference between completing a Contract or failing. It can be spent for various rewards like gaining cards or actions, but if carefully saved throughout the game it can even mean gaining additional Prestige.

GAME SETUP

GAMEPLAY

GLOSSARY

□ ≡ GAME SETUP > ARMORY & DISPATCH ≡ □

Begin by setting up the base game of Moonrakers as laid out in its rulebook, with the following exceptions:

Armory Board

1) Add the Binding Ties Ship Parts to the main deck of Ship Parts from the Base game before shuffling and placing onto the Armory Board.

2) Add the Binding Ties  Crew cards to the main deck of  Crew from the Base game before shuffling and placing onto the Armory Board.

Dispatch Board

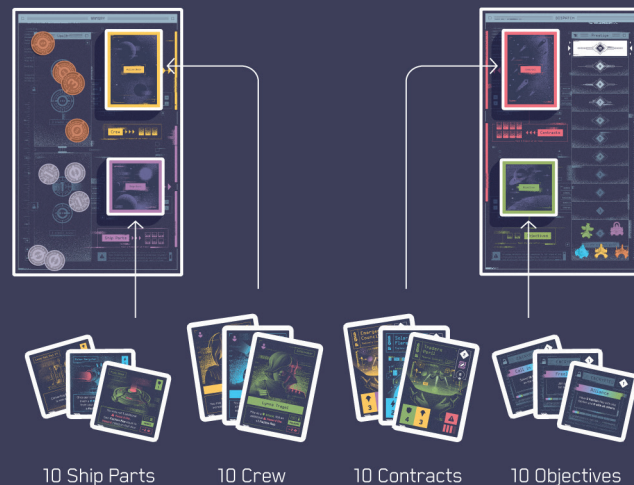

1) Add the Binding Ties Contracts to the main deck of Contracts from the Base game before shuffling and placing onto the Dispatch Board.

2) Add the Binding Ties Objectives to the main deck of Objectives from the Base game before shuffling, placing onto the Dispatch Board, and dealing 3 to each player. Players will secretly choose 2 and discard the 3rd to the bottom of the Objective Deck as outlined in the base game rules.

NOTE

The Binding Ties Expansion can only be played with 3-5 players.

ARMORY_&_DISPATCH.IMG

NOTE

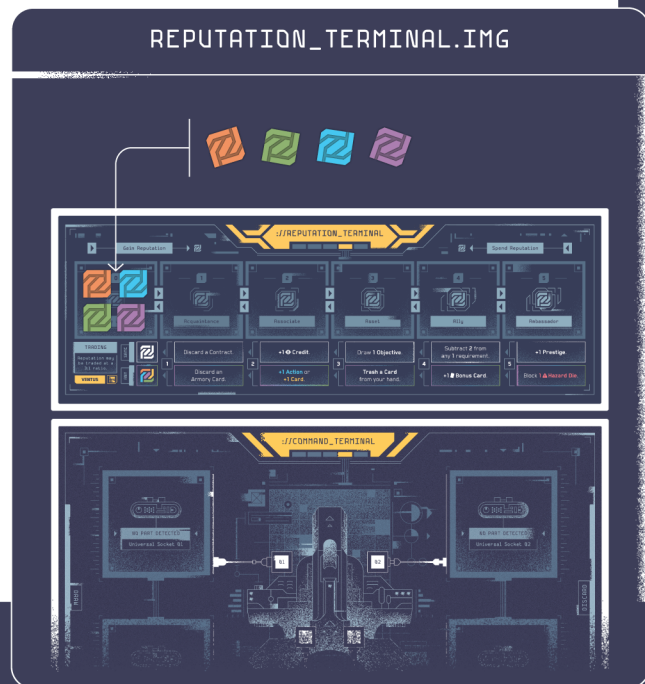

All expansions have their own marker in the bottom left hand side of the card.

If you wish to play just the base game of Moonrakers or without certain expansions, it's helpful to separate out the expansion cards. You can do so by looking for the expansion marker in the bottom left of the card.

□ ≡ GAME SETUP > REPUTATION TERMINALS ≡ □

Each player should take the Reputation Terminal in the same color as their Command Terminal and place it on the table above their Command Terminal in view of the other players.

Next, each player takes a Faction Token matching the color of all other players (but not their own color) and place them on the 0 space of their Reputation Terminals, returning any unused colors to the game's box.

□ ≡ GAME SETUP > REPUTATION TERMINALS ≡ □

Once the Binding Ties cards have been combined into the base game's respective decks and all players have their Reputation Terminal and Faction Tokens, you are ready to begin the game!

GLOSSARY

GAMEPLAY > BINDING TIES

The Binding Ties expansion plays very similarly to the base game of Moonrakers, but adds extra incentive to ally with others, providing interesting choices of how to best use those rewards.

Faction Reputation is tracked on your Reputation Terminal and can be spent to help you accomplish Contracts, upgrade your Ship, gain new Objectives, or even gain Prestige.

Faction Rep Abilities

Faction Rep Reward

GAMEPLAY > EARNING REPUTATION

Earning Faction Reputation

Players can gain Faction Reputation in a few ways:

1) Allying with other players

- Players who complete a Contract together as Allies all gain 1 Faction Reputation with each other's Faction color

2) Contract Rewards

- Some Contracts will have Faction Reputation as a reward. These become a part of negotiation just like Prestige and  Credits during the Negotiation phase of a Contract.

- This reward will be associated with one of the Factions based on its color. If you gain the Faction reputation reward, you gain one Faction Reputation with that color Faction.

- If you represent that Faction or if no player represents that Faction in the current game, then you may choose which Faction to gain Reputation with.

3) Crew and Ship Part Abilities

- Some  Crew and Ship parts will allow you to gain Faction Reputation with a specific Faction or one of your choice.

GAMEPLAY > RECORDING REPUTATION

Recording Faction Reputation

When you gain Faction Reputation, move the appropriate color Faction token one space to the right on the Reputation Terminal. Players cannot have less than 0 or more than 5 Faction Reputation with any Faction.

ANY Any Rep cost box.

GAMEPLAY > SPENDING REPUTATION

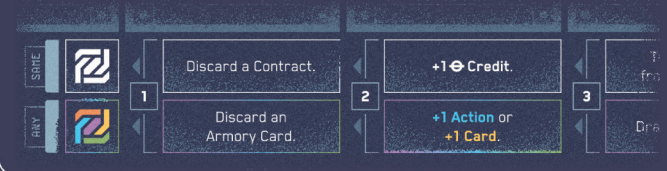

Spending Faction Reputation:

Players may spend their Faction Reputation for rewards and assistance with completing Contracts during the game.

To spend Faction Reputation, a player simply moves a Faction token one space to the left on the track on their Reputation Terminal board for each Faction Reputation spent.

Rewards with a white box in the "SAME" titled row must be acquired using only one color of Faction Reputation, while rewards with a gradient box in the "ANY" titled row can be acquired by spending several different Faction's Reputation.

REWARDS.IMG

Additionally, some of the Rewards can be gained at any time while others can only be gained at particular times. This will be outlined in the following pages.

1 Reputation

Discard a Contract

As Mission Leader you may trade a Faction Reputation to discard a Contract and draw a new one during your planning phase. A player can do this as many times as they would like.

REPUTATION_SPEND_SAME.IMG

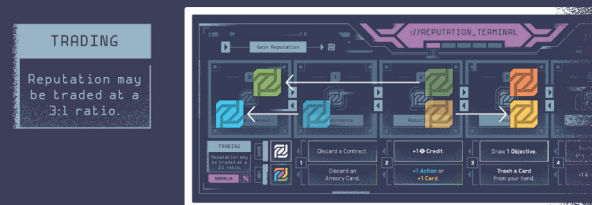

If a player Trades in 5 Faction Reputation to gain a Prestige, they must first have a Faction Token on the 5th space of their Reputation Terminal track. They would then move it from that space to the 0 space and gain 1 Prestige.

GAMEPLAY > TRADING REPUTATION

At any time, a player can trade any combination of 3 Faction Reputation to gain 1 Faction Reputation of another color.

REPUTATION_TRADE.IMG

REPUTATION_SPEND_ANY.IMG

If a player trades in 5 Faction Reputation to block 1  Hazard Die, they must spend a total of 5 Faction Reputation of any combination by moving those Faction tokens a total of 5 spaces to the left on their Reputation Terminal Track. They may then block  Hazards rolled on 1  Hazard Die that was targeting them during a Contract.

GAMEPLAY > LOSING REPUTATION

Losing Faction Reputation

If a Contract is failed, all players on the Contract lose one Faction Reputation from each of their Allies' Faction colors. A player cannot have less than 0 Faction Reputation with any Faction. If a Mission Leader fails a Contract alone, there is no Faction Reputation penalty.

LOSING_REPUTATION.IMG

If the Komek and Henko players attempt a Contract together but are unable to complete it, both players would move the Faction Token matching their Allies' color one space to the left on their Reputation Terminal's track.

GAMEPLAY > EXTRAS

Additional Rules

Faction Reputation is not part of the negotiation process during the planning phase. All players gain or lose Faction Reputation depending upon the outcome of the Contract, even if a player negotiates for no rewards on the Contract itself.

Once Faction Reputation is spent (i.e. the token moved on their boards), a player cannot change their mind and recover it.

Faction Reputation may not be traded among players. Faction Reputation rewards from Contracts are negotiated like any other reward.

New Buy Phase Rules

Players may now freely discard 1 ♡ Crew or Ship Part from the Armory at the beginning of their buy phase. After their free discard, they may spend 1 ⚡ Credit to discard a second card at any time during their buy phase, but not a third.

Advice

Once you have a Faction at space 5 it is generally a good idea to spend it so that other players are not tempted to betray you in order to force you to lose Faction Reputation with them.

Your Faction Terminal is helpful for soloing Contracts, but spending it early may cost you a Prestige in the late game!
